Transcontinental Direct's Mail-Gard Division Opens Second Print-to-Mail Recovery Facility

WARMINSTER, Pa., September 2, 2008 – The Mail-Gard[®] division of Transcontinental Direct, the nation's leading provider of print-to-mail continuity and recovery services, announced today that it has opened a second print-to-mail recovery facility in Forth Worth, TX.

"Mail-Gard's growth has continued steadily over the past five years. We're outgrowing our current facility, and conditions were right for setting up a second location," said Jerry Montella, Vice President of Mail-Gard, who stated that customer demand and industry trends were the catalyst to opening the second location.

Mail-Gard's Texas location will offer the print and insert capacity to complete 1.5 million envelopes per day. With the addition of this facility Mail-Gard's total recovery capacity is now nearly 3 million envelopes per day. Increased capacity is only one benefit of the second location, Mail-Gard can now offer clients the ability to test in the Texas location, saving travel costs and the added benefit of knowing their production can be recovered at either Mail-Gard location. Another important advantage is the ability for a more seamless recovery of Mail-Gard's Warminster facility in the event of an emergency, giving customers the confidence that under any circumstances, their product is safe in Mail-Gard's hands. The Texas recovery facility will offer both cut sheet and continuous laser print, and intelligent insert capabilities including the latest in document tracking technology.

The demand for guaranteed recovery access has increased recently as company compliance requirements grow to meet tightening security and continuity laws. The second recovery facility will allow Mail-Gard to offer a guaranteed solution to clients who require immediate and assured access to their print and insert production needs. "Our customers requested a guaranteed access solution and we pride ourselves on listening to our client needs and staying in front of both technology and industry trends," Montella said.

"Transcontinental Direct is proud to be a part of the industry's only redundant print-to-mail recovery facility." said Transcontinental Direct President Rob Young. "We are committed to expanding our growth in the continuity industry through leadership, best practices and technical expertise."
